

Essay

Some people believe that there should be fixed punishment for each type of crime, others, however argue that the circumstances of an individual crime, and the motivation for committing it, should always be taken into account when deciding on punishment. Discuss both these views and give your opinion.

It is often argued that fixed punishment^s should be imposed on every ^{person who is} convicted. On the contrary, other people think that punishment should be provided taking the circumstances and motivation into consideration. I believe that several factors should be analysed to reach to the final verdict. (what kind of an answer is this? very vaguely worded; as good as no answer provided)

"Let hundred guilty be acquitted, but ^{even} one innocent should not be convicted." With this saying we can sense the vision of our judiciary ^{correct: judiciary}. Nowadays , people, media and many well-established lawyer^s can be purchased to ^{better: influenced or even bought over} sensationalised ~~case~~ ⁱⁿ ~~on~~ ~~their~~ ^{of certain powerful people,} favour ^{which in} turn ^{can lead to trapping} ~~trapped~~ ~~the~~ soft targets. For instance, women nowadays use dowry cases as a tool against inlaws or people with higher status in society can manipulate justice. Also, behind every suicide, murder or robbery there are ^{worse} ~~worst~~ ^{i (error of capitalization)} situations which should be taken into account. Poor people cannot afford monetary expenses of ^{fighting} ~~the~~ case, hence replace with a better phrase sometimes they landed in the mud of injustice

On the other hand, ^a few people favour the idea of fixed punishment stating ^{that} it will inculcate the fear of jurisdiction among local people. But, to dig it [?] one might be successful in punishing the guilty but certainly, loose the people with same motivation ^{meaning not clear} behind it. As an example, people can manipulate the hot-headed person to commit crime, if there is fixed punishment, the motivator cannot be convicted. ^{ed} Also, the age factor plays an important role. A kid can be easily influence to execute crime.

this is a discuss both sides; you are to discuss the positive points of each side in each body paragraph; your personal opinion is in the intro and the conclusion; -ve observations are somewhat irrelevant in the body

To recapitulate, all the factors should be considered very seriously before giving punishment or verdict as not every punishment can lead a better human being, some can destroy many lives ^{lives}.

the essay shows limited sentence structure there are frequent errors of various types coherence is ok but is affected at points because of errors essay is more or less relevant; but you should eliminate -ves of each side discussed your opinion in the introduction should be clearly mentioned
