

Q. In many countries, crime rates amongst younger people have been rising. Discuss the causes and solutions for this problem.

3:35-4:40 (Time taken)

Crime rates among the youth have been increasing in numerous countries. This essay will discuss the main causes of rise in crime rates in youth including lack of job opportunities and poor education system. This essay will also suggest solutions to these problems including improving the quality of education and creation of new jobs.

Young people do not have many jobs options available. In addition, education system of many countries is extremely bad and outdated. Because governments are not making a priority to spend enough budgets on education so it creates a gap in industry which is leading to lack of open jobs for youth. For example, students of public schools in Pakistan could not read English and solve complex numerical problems. This results in scarcity of educated people to start any business that is causing the shortage of jobs which directly impacts youth. Therefore, they get involve in different crimes to meet their needs.

Improving the quality of education and creation of new jobs are both critical to stop young generation to involve in crimes. It is imperative for countries to prioritize initiatives for the improvement of education system because if people do not have access to good education, they would not have the knowledge to differentiate between good and bad things.

Additionally, creating new employment opportunities means people would not have to choose the wrong paths to feed their families. For instance, uneducated jobless young people are reported to more likely involve in crimes because they have no options available to earn. So, the best way to keep our youth away from crimes is to give them quality education and to create more work opportunities

In conclusion, the number of young people involving in crimes is rising in many countries. This essay discussed how crime rate among young people is increasing because of low quality of education system and less job options available. This essay also suggested that the solution to this problem is to improve the quality of education and create more employment opportunities for youth.